Development Casting Munjal Ahuja and Sanjay Gadhvi agreed to make the film in August 1999 when the director was working on his next film on the script of which he later changed and then later it was Nalwa.

Nalwa's script was further revised and the film was titled Agneepath and then finally Shikari which was later changed to Mere Yaar Ki Shaadi Hai. Bipasha Basu was cast for the role of a deaf and mute girl, while Nandita Das was initially approached for the role, which was later played by Tulip Joshi. Uday

Chopra was cast to play the lead role of a rich businessman who was tortured for killing a local gangster, while Mahima Chaudhry was cast to play his girlfriend who was a deaf and mute. Sanjay Gadhvi cast one of his long-time friends Jaya Bachchan for a role in the film. While working with Gadhvi on Shikari, Jaya had suggested to Gadhvi to give her a role in the film which he refused due to his poor relationship with her. Gadhvi had to call her as a favor to his friend and former colleague Sanjay Nayak.

Filming Shooting began in February 2002. The movie was a costly production. There were many fights during the shooting of the film. At one point, Ahuja was reportedly hurt in a fight and had to be taken to the hospital. While shooting the film, he was supposed to shoot a scene in a mosque. On the day of the shooting, the studio was full and so Gadhvi decided to shoot in the open as there was less work to be done. While shooting the scene, he decided to shoot the shot in a different way. When Gadhvi asked for permission to shoot the scene again, the entire crew protested. The director was then approached by Asrani who then asked the lead actors to continue shooting as the film has been shot. After the shoot was over, Asrani along with him went to see Gadhvi at his house where he scolded him and then left. The film was shot in the countries of Kerala, Hyderabad, Rajasthan, Mumbai and Italy. The first schedule of shooting was done in April, which involved the entire cast and crew. In June, a second schedule of filming was done in Mumbai and the second half of the film was shot
