(Tom Lym/The Post-Standard) By Matt Leipold The Post-Standard CHICAGO – As the Chicago Bears prepare for a rematch with the New England Patriots on Sunday, they'll have a different look about them. Quarterback Jay Cutler has been cleared to play after sitting out last week's victory over the Miami Dolphins with a sprained ankle, and the Bears' defense is expected to have linebacker Jon Bostic back at full strength after he sustained a neck injury in the first quarter. With that, here's a look at what the Bears will look like as they face a Patriots team that has struggled offensively this season and will not have Tom Brady and Rob Gronkowski for the second consecutive week. Offense: Cutler (ankle) vs. Brady (calf) This matchup of one of the NFL's top quarterbacks is overshadowed by the health of his counterpart, Tom Brady. The concept of a mega festival on the Black Rock desert in the Nevada desert has gotten a lot of media attention in the past few years. But for the first time this year, they're bringing a lot of Bitcoin to the event, making a lot of people (somewhat) uncomfortable. "Is it ethical to sell things with crypto and then have money talk made from it?" asked a woman from New York. "I don't know. It's a whole new world, right?" "We came to talk about the future of our currency, and we're just kind of enjoying that," said one of the men. So what's happening? Well, people at Burning Man are embracing the new technology in more ways than you might expect. And they're using it for good, like helping people with food and other important things. The folks from BitcoinBooth.io are giving away some of the world's most expensive Bitcoin ATMs at the event to help people get a little richer. People can use these ATMs to buy Bitcoin, Ethereum, and Litecoin. The company is also giving away the world's most expensive Bitcoin ATM, which is for sale for $110,000, after the first two people purchased it for $30,000 each. And if you're lucky enough to win, you'll get about $40,000 worth of crypto. Another booth is 2d92ce91b
