Does the following command work? update:sender list -D A: You can try this: $ find. -type f -name *.csv -or -name *.xlsx -type f - This gives you all the files in your current directory. -or - This means you must have the xlsx or csv file to work. In all practical terms, this doesn't mean any of the files have to be in any specific directory but it means the file in the current directory will work. And finally, this is for Linux. The same command will work for Mac. A: Try this in terminal or shell: sudo find. -type f -name '*.txt' -exec grep -l "your keywords" {} \; sudo find. -type f -name '*.txt' -exec grep -1 "your keywords" {} \; | awk '{print $NF}' If you have files like.csv or.xlsx, then just replace "*.txt" with appropriate extension in command. This will work. Electrical connectors may be used to join various wires together or to connect wires to an electrical device. For example, the electrical connectors may be used to provide the attachment point for wires supplying power to electrical devices. In some electrical connectors, an electrical box may be used to couple the electrical device to the electrical connector and provide a conduit to direct the power to the electrical device. The electrical connector may be coupled to the electrical device by using a wire to wire or an electrical coupler (e.g., a power coupler) to power coupling the electrical connector and the electrical device. However, the use of such couplers can be difficult. For example, the coupler can be difficult to attach to the electrical device and/or the electrical box can be difficult to assemble the coupler to the electrical device. The electrical connector can be difficult to assemble or attach to the electrical device, 2d92ce491b
