I have a datetime picker on an asp.net form that I am trying to get the values in (the selected times), I am using the datetimepicker control in ASP.NET. I need to get the list of times that were selected and create a list of dates that are equal to the time. So that if the user select a time of 12:00am on Monday the date in the list will be 5/4/2009. Any help on this would be very much appreciated. A: You can handle a valuechanged event and do what you need based on the selected date. There is also a Value property. It will give you the value you need. (used in dropdownlist to get selected value) The ValueChanged property will give you the selected date only. The Value property of the datetimepicker will hold the selected date. You can loop over the values and compare to a DateTime structure. If you're talking about just getting a list of all of the selected values (the "value list" of the date picker), you can use the ValueList property of the control. Use the property in a loop to get all of the selected values. This is a property of the Control class, not a property of any particular DateTimePicker control. Reverse replicative transcription: a mechanism for the formation of small RNA in Arabidopsis chloroplasts. Plastidic reverse transcriptase has been purified from Arabidopsis chloroplasts. This enzyme produces RNAs that are complementary to the template. The substrates in the reactions catalyzed by plastidic reverse transcriptase are the same as those for the authentic mammalian mitochondrial polymerase. Whereas the reverse transcriptase from the chloroplast does not recognize a primer, a ribozyme
