But how to use it? It's very simple. Just unzip it and then copy all the files inside the zip archive into your "Program files" directory. Once done, start up the tool with Note: If you are running as Administrator, then you will not be able to use the tool. In that case, you will have to start the tool as another user. You can do this by opening a command prompt, and entering the following command: del "%Program Files\FrontEndussetool.exe" 4. Install Airsync Although Airsync is included with everything that comes with Front Endussetool, it is no fun to have the tool and Airsync sitting on your PC, without having them together. So, we will install it. The tool that I have used to create this tutorial is the same one that comes with Front Endussetool. So, you can use the tool to create the installation package that you can download from the download page on our website. If you want, you can download it from here. 5. Setup the Software License Key Once you have downloaded and installed the tool, you will be able to use it. The first time you run the tool, it will prompt you to setup a license key. You will be asked to enter the license key that you received with your package. You will also be able to specify the product that you are using it with. There are two types of licenses that are available for the tool. One is the commercial one and the other is the free. The commercial license entitles you to use the tool on more than 10 PCs. On the other hand, the free license allows you to use the tool on one PC. The free license is not restricted in anyway. Once you have entered the license key and the product that you are using it on, the tool will setup the license key. It will ask you to restart the PC. Once the PC is restarted, the license key will be registered and you can use the tool on multiple computers. 6. Setup a Patch Now that you have setup a license key for your tool, it is time to setup a patch for it. The tool has an option to create a patch. You will have to specify the type of patch that you are creating, its name and where you want it to be installed. You can also specify a friendly name for the patch. This will allow you
