Jan 21, 2018 With many tools available these days it's often necessary to find a third-party solution. Unless you're a developer, there's little chance that you're entirely comfortable. For instance, when using JavaFX, you may remember that it tends to do an awful lot of its own stuff, which can lead to a non-standard gantt chart and can cause a lot of headaches if you're not careful. If you've run into any of this issues, Kolor has come to your rescue with the release of Kolor Panotour. The general idea of this tool is that it's designed to take the drudgery out of creating panoramas. Sure, you could do the work yourself. But wouldn't it be nice if there were a tool that made this process smoother. Now that we have a bit of time to speak with the folks over at Kolor we can say that this is exactly the case. There are several aspects of Kolor Panotour that make this program ideal for creating virtual tours. The user interface is surprisingly slick and has a.
