The more we as a society become more dependent on technology, the more we have to be conscious of the implications of our actions on the world we leave behind. It has become so common for us to be connected to the outside world, whether it be through smartphones, email, television, social media, or even the internet itself, that we don't take the time to think about what we are doing. This could be a blessing in many ways, but there are also significant implications.
