* Dramatic color adjustment: Desaturates an image to eliminate almost all colors or replaces them with a brighter version, as shown in Figure 4-1. * Effects: Dramatically alters the overall appearance of an image, as shown in Figure 4-2. * Filters: Enhances an image with special effects such as sharpening, blur, reflection, mirror, and even morphing, as shown in Figure 4-3. * Lighting: Manages the brightness of an image, as shown in Figure 4-4. * Textures: Makes raster images look like high-resolution textures from an X-ray or ultra-sonic inspection, as shown in Figure 4-5. * Tracing: Allows you to trace a path over an object on an image, automatically fill areas of the image, or trace the path of a written word or other shape. FIGURE 4-1: The Remove Color panel gives you complete control over an image's color. FIGURE 4-2: The Effects panel alters an image's appearance with lots of choices. FIGURE 4-3: Many filter effects are available in this panel. FIGURE 4-4: The Lighting panel adjusts the brightness of an image. FIGURE 4-5: Use the Textures panel to make an image look like a high-res texture. Photoshop comes with about 600 filter-type effects, including the crop tool, which enables you to zoom into an image for a closer look; the drawing tool, which draws precise lines and shapes; the paintbrush, which uses a highlighter to paint and then erase; and the eyedropper, which allows you to sample colors and turn them into layer colors. You can also use the quick-filter tool, which is the on/off button of sorts to apply one of Photoshop's filter effects to an image. It's a great way to apply the blur effect quickly. Photoshop also offers several drawing tools, such as the pencil, pen, and brush, which enables you to draw lines, shapes, and freehand artwork. You can also apply some basic shapes, such as the oval and rectangle. Finally, you can experiment with the excellent raster and vector tools, which enable you to create, edit, and work with paths and layer masks. Photoshop offers many other tools, such

Pages Monday, February 10, 2011 30 Days of Thankful Post #29 The reason I have been so absent lately is that I have been busy with trying to raise money for a worthy cause. I have been collecting sponsors and donations for the 30 Days of Thankful Challenge. At the end of thirty days, I will choose a charity and a link to give away a drawing of free art supplies. (the art supplies are sponsored by Schmincke Industries so that I can get one free of charge. Trust me - they are amazing!) At the end of the 30 days, I will choose a charity that I believe in and support as I would any other organization. I will find links and post with examples of past artwork and how I designed them. I am looking forward to the growing link collection and hope that they all reflect the many ways artists around the world find creative ways to express thanks. The culture of gratitude is becoming more and more widely accepted today. In fact, it is almost considered a necessity! I believe that it is because most of us are struggling to stay positive. To keep from being overwhelmed, we clench our fists and turn our heads inside out like a chicken to protect ourselves. We can't see past our own noses right now. It's amazing how a little good news can get our hands moving again. If you need some ideas, I've posted a few examples of things to be thankful for and links to other resources to give you some inspiration. Be sure to check out the 30 Days of Thankful Challenge page on my website for daily posts. 30 Days of Thankful Post #29 I love this photo! I decided to use it to practice my watercolor skills. 30 Days of Thankful Post #29 30 Days of Thankful Post #29 30 Days of Thankful Post #29 In answer to your question, I see a theme emerging here. I've chosen to sponsor a few artists who are already new to blogging. You can visit their blogs and leave them a comment and let them know you have been inspired to visit their site. 1) No comments required here, I just wanted to offer a bit of my thanks. 2) I thank God for my family. 3) I thank God for my friends. 4) I thank God for my pets. They are an amazingly fun and loving family. 5) I thank God
