How to get the most out of Antivirus Software In order to stay ahead of your online enemies, it's crucial to have the proper antivirus software. But does the right antivirus software suit your needs? In this article, we'll provide you with some helpful tips to help you make the best choice when picking an antivirus program.

Types of Antivirus Software Antivirus is a security software application that's designed to protect your computer and its associated devices. The two most common forms are a personal antivirus program (for home computers and laptops) and an antivirus program (which is specifically designed to protect business computers and networks). With both types of antivirus software, the goal is to protect your computer from malware (i.e. viruses, trojans, adware, worms, spyware, dialers, rogues, etc.) and also ensure that your system is protected from hackers. The two major categories of antivirus software are online anti-malware software and standalone antivirus software. Standalone antivirus software is typically installed on your computer before you use the internet. It usually comes with built-in features that protect against viruses as well as most malware threats, so you don't need to launch an online antivirus program. These two types of programs are not compatible, so you can't install standalone antivirus software on your computer if you already own an online antivirus program. It's also not recommended to install an online anti-malware program on a portable device (such as a tablet or smartphone) that's connected to the internet. There are exceptions though;
