History AutoCAD is the name of the first program released by Autodesk. The acronym AutoCAD is often used as the name of the program, but is occasionally used as a short form for Autodesk, Inc. The Autodesk name was first used in 1975, when the company began operations. The first commercially available AutoCAD release was called AutoCAD 0.01, released in December 1982. It was created by AutoCAD's original developer, Peter Burg, and was based on a separate application called Auto-Draw. The first consumer release of AutoCAD was AutoCAD 1.0, released in May 1984. At that time, AutoCAD was still marketed as a drafting application, despite its ability to model three-dimensional objects. Later consumer releases included version 1.1 in 1986, version 1.2 in 1989, and version 2.0 in 1994. A professional version of AutoCAD was available in 1984 and is still sold today. The software was originally released as AutoCAD LT for Macs and Windows. Autodesk switched to the non-long-form name AutoCAD in 1988. AutoCAD LT has a maximum drawing size of 200 MB (later increased to 500 MB), while the full AutoCAD software can model up to 50 MB. The original release of AutoCAD LT featured the functionality of AutoCAD Release 4. This release was called Autodesk Topographical. Autodesk later released AutoCAD LT 1.0, which was a revamped version of Topographical. This release was named AutoCAD LT 3.0. In 1995, Autodesk released AutoCAD LT 4.0, which was known as Release 4 in the United States. By 1995, Autodesk had begun marketing AutoCAD as a product for model-makers. This came after the release of AutoCAD Release 5, which was also the first to be sold by Autodesk directly to the public. Release 5 was known as Release 5LT, and was discontinued in favor of the release 5. It was later replaced by AutoCAD Release 6. Release 7 was released in May 1999, and is known as AutoCAD Standard, was released under a shareware model, and was distributed on disk only. This was the first release of AutoCAD to be distributed by Autodesk.

It is an interesting time of the year for me, for many reasons. From the familiarity of going to your local Walmart on Halloween night, to the spooky candies that are on every grocery store shelves, and everything in between. One of the main reason of course is the anticipation of all the tricks and treats that are about to come with the spookiest night of the year. The time of year that kids dress in their favorite costumes, and adults take to the streets in their best attire. I am a big fan of trick or treating. One of the memories I have is trick or treating in the neighborhood with my friend when we were kids, and the fun and memories we had. It is such a great way to spend the day with friends and neighbors. I find that many people love to get together with friends and neighbors, and go out for a night of trick or treating and enjoy the evening with family and friends. This is what the newly married couple and I decided to do this year. I wanted to plan a fun family day around going to a few local haunted houses and enjoying some spooky candy. We started out the day with a mini pumpkin patch adventure. We took a hayride that was haunted as well. This was the first time that the boys were exposed to this experience. They both loved it. It was a first for all of us, and I love how it was a really fun time for all of us! Spooky a1d647c40b
