• Total of 9 drum kits Monokote ($34.95) from Shure is an outstanding transparent coat for your studio that will not only protect your new monitors from scratches but will also help them to grow shine. The product is completely ready to use and requires no special preparation, all you need to do is apply it properly to your monitors. Monokote is made from monofilament (silver in color) and will not absorb any audio whatsoever. It will therefore help to dampen internal resonance and decrease resonance peaks as well as touch peaks in the spectrum. You will also notice that the tone becomes more even through the entire frequency range. It is perfect for tracking and also ideal for mixing as it is ideal for miking your monitors. Monokote has everything you need for a great monitoring setup. The unique symmetrical coating evenly distributed over the front and rear side of the monitor is placed on both surfaces equally. The result is superb transparency and uniform coloration in both reflections and transmission. Since it is silver, it does not affect the coloration at all. When using Monokote, you can gain up to two full decibels in overall sound level for half of the cost of a professional product. Monokote performs no polishing and has a matte finish. The unique coloration gives your monitors a new look and sparkles and makes them look even more professional. You can choose between black and transparent. Monokote is available in 5 sizes from 20" to 45" and 8 versions from 50 to 250mm in total height.
