Stellar Phoenix 42:.External breast lump with minimal axillary lymphadenopathy as the initial presentation of a breast carcinoma. This report describes a case of a breast carcinoma detected only by palpation and minimal axillary lymphadenopathy, in the absence of clinical or mammographic findings. The mass was very fine, seroma-like, and mobile in the axilla. Diagnosis was made by cytology only, with a fine-needle aspiration biopsy, and it proved to be a carcinoma of no special type. The patient had a poor response to chemotherapy. In this report we emphasize the importance of the fine-needle aspiration biopsy technique in the diagnosis of a breast mass in the presence of minimal axillary lymphadenopathy.Halolactibacillus halophilus sp. nov., from salterns of Nagpur, India.
