If you have multiple projects to work on at the same time, Photoshop can get very cluttered. Unlike other design programs, which use a collection of vector- or bitmap-based graphics, Photoshop relies on photo-based graphics and therefore requires a lot of storage space. If your disk drive is small or if you are creating a website on a disk drive for a desktop computer, you should consider compressing your graphics before you import them into Photoshop (also called `_dumping_`). You can also create shading effects, drop shadows, and apply special blending modes. Styles: You can create multiple styles from a single image or you can create new styles for a style library. Photoshop lets you sync your settings to your Creative Cloud account so that you can access the content you're working on across devices. Filter effects: A few effects are commonly used in a variety of applications for retouching, compositing, and enhancing images. These filters include distorts, blurs, and other fixes. Image adjustments: The most popular of these tools is the Levels tool, which

A: You can't change the source code of the class (as you seem to imply in your "problem statement"). You'll need to create your own XmlSerializer. Binding studies of hydrophobic probe on phosphatidylcholine bilayer. The effect of protein/lipid (P/L) interactions on the binding of hydrophobic probes such as palmitic acid (PA), 2, 4-dinitrophenol (DNP) and merocyanine 540 (MC 540) in a palmitoyloleoylphosphatidylcholine (POPC) membrane was studied. The change of fluorescence polarization (FP) of fluorescent probes in the lipid bilayers was measured for the systems with and without protein. The binding of PA to the membrane was perturbed by the lipid/lipid interactions of HII-16m alpha-L, 22c-L, 14c-L, 15c-L, 18c-L and 20c-L, but not by the protein/lipid interactions. The binding of DNP to the membrane was also perturbed by the lipid/lipid interactions in the case of HII-20m alpha-L, 22c-L, 14c-L, 15c-L and 16m alpha-L, but not by the protein/lipid interactions. The binding of MC 540 was not perturbed by the lipid/lipid interactions and only by the protein/lipid interactions
