The rising popularity of the New York City marathon has led to an upsurge in the prices for luxury hotel rooms right after the race ends. The bargain-hunter overnight prices of hotels in the Big Apple after Sunday's race began to skyrocket on Monday. To remain competitive, the five-star hotels are reportedly slashing their room prices to attract more clientele, according to The Wall Street Journal. The peak prices of some hotels have increased by as much as 72 percent after the race ends on Monday. These hotel stays are meant to entice runners into dropping their money on those red-carpet tickets that will make them famous after they cross that finish 570a42141b
