We describe a case of primary vertebral osteosarcoma in a 23-year-old white man with no significant past medical history. The patient presented with gait abnormalities and progressive back pain of 3 weeks' duration. The diagnosis was made on clinical and radiologic grounds and confirmed on histopathologic grounds. Computed tomography and magnetic resonance imaging (MRI) scans showed a large vertebral body and paraspinal tumor involving the spinal canal and extending into the spinal canal. The patient was treated with surgical resection of the tumor with pediculated laminectomy with en bloc excision of the tumor. The patient has been followed up for 16 months, and there has been no evidence of recurrence or metastasis. The patient has been ambulatory for the 16 months after his surgery.Q: How to use 82138339de
