If you wish to provide links to your Xbox Live media, this will not work as the information to display are static, and would require a significant amount of coding. This same problem will occur if you wish to allow display of xbox live points. If you wish to modify the application to include other information, be prepared to do significant programming. .NET version 2.0 or greater is required for this application to run. xCard360 allows users to enter their gamer tag information from within an ASP.NET application hosted on a web server. .NET version 3.5 or higher is also required to install the necessary libraries required to run xCard360. Xbox Live cross-network name and gamer tag (XNA ID) are saved in a database field, and a.CSV file is generated to download to the user's computer as well as a registry entry is created. If the correct version of.NET is not installed, the application will not run, and the user will not be notified of the missing.NET components. If a different version of.NET is installed, but still can not run, the application will not run, and will report the version of.NET installed. It does not put a user's gamer tag data in a URL when it is downloaded, but you can modify the server-side code to update the URL if desired. xCard360 can also be customized to display information such as birth date or height. If the user's profile does not have the "Show my gamer tag" option in their profile settings, or if the user's profile or Xbox Live account is not setup correctly, the xCard360 application will not list the gamer tag in the xCard360 application. They have been asked to help in the identification of two, 800-year-old, southern African spears that were unearthed in Barberton, Eastern Cape, during a project supported by the Iziko South African Museum. It is believed the spearheads, called dagwers, belonged to the Middle Stone Age. Researchers from Wits University and the Iziko South African Museum, working at the site, recently made a discovery that will allow them to better understand the history of the dagwers. According to Debbie Pilgrim, a South African Museum Curator, the historical information on the dagwers has been proven to be inaccurate. "They are not quite what we thought at all," said Pilgrim. "They are not just straight-rifles, as we had thought them, but instead they are these highly curved pieces that can be used to throw large knives over long distances." The dagwers were made of a green stone, which has been identified as a type of granite called smoothweld, according to research by Wits University and the Iziko South African Museum. The dagwers are presumed to be used by the Khoisan, who were hunter-gatherers
