:)Q: How to run a file against a particular user? I am using TeamCity 10.0.1, I want to run a file in my Ruby on Rails project but that file should be executed against user1. I am not able to figure out a way to accomplish this. Any help is appreciated.

TeamCity has functionality to work around this, however it is not enabled by default. In order to run the build under one user only, you must enable the "Always run builds as one user" option when right clicking the build. A: TeamCity simply generates new instance of the project and runs your build with a new user. If you execute it manually you will see that it creates new process under different user. Open your console and try running it on the same user. Q: How to get the description of a packet using python's socket module I have written a Python program using python's socket module. The
