Get More Done Take control of your text messages. With the official Moto X text app, you'll get new notifications for incoming texts, automated actions, and great battery saving features. Step 1: Read all your text messages You've already heard the best part, but you need to read all your texts! The Mail app doesn't natively support notifications for your text messages, so we've made it easy for you to check all the incoming texts. Every time you have a new text message, your phone will show a notification, and you'll be able to quickly launch the text app and check the message. Step 2: Automate message replies Stay on top of your text conversations by automatically replying to incoming texts or starting a group text conversation. Every text app has different text app rules, so we've provided a link to the rules for each app below. Check the link for the app you use regularly, or follow the link below to learn more about the text app rules for other apps. Download the text app for Android Step 3: Control when notifications interrupt your work Every app has different work modes to tell you when you should take action while working. You can easily change the mode you're working in with just a tap. Download the text app for iOS Step 4: Switching back to your calls and other notifications Want to give your inbox a rest for a little while? No problem. You'll be notified about incoming texts in the text app when you switch back to calls or other notifications. 09e8f5149f

Categorize your subscriptions based on topics, integrate them in the main page and sidebar, and more. Chrome Web Store has plenty of extensions to improve the user experience on the popular video-sharing website, and PocketTube for Chrome numbers among the more popular ones, and for good reason: categorize your subscriptions based on topics, integrate them in the main page and sidebar, and more. An easy way to sort everything As with most add-ons, installing doesn't take long and doesn't involve any complicated operations. Upon adding the extension to your browser, you'll see a new Subscription Groups section in your YouTube sidebar. Clicking it will allow you to create new groups, as well as see the channels you're currently subscribed to. It's needless to say that creating a group only takes a few seconds: choosing your preferred icons to assign to the groups may take more time, though. After getting this done, you can navigate to the Channels tab and start categorizing everything. The process is intuitive and shouldn't pose a problem for anyone. Besides having the groups nicely slotted in your sidebar, the extension also allows for some extra customization. Clicking its icon will reveal some settings to make use of: for instance, you can hide the grouped channels in the sidebar and move them directly to the homepage, where your recommended clips are. The extension additionally supports a Tags functionality: based on your grouped channels and the generated tags, you can view the newest videos on a topic from your favorite creators. What's more, you can also have the subscription groups inform you of any new videos directly from the sidebar through an icon: it's non-intrusive, but hiding it in the settings is possible if it bothers you. In conclusion PocketTube claims to improve the user experience on YouTube, and after some thorough testing, we can concur that it does.
