You can use Quick Selection to select a particular area and apply a filter to it. You can also create a frame around an area by selecting the frame and moving a selection marquee to fit over the frame you select. Figure 12-2: Quick Selection can be used for a lot of things, including moving or enlarging an area. ### What's New In?

The present invention relates to apparatus for the mixing of fluid materials, and more specifically, to apparatus for mixing materials in the preparation of cement. In a typical cement plant, a raw mix feeder is coupled to a hopper for storing raw materials, and several mixers are coupled to the output of the feeder for forming cementitious mix, before delivery through a gate to a chute for a kiln. During the mixing operation, the raw materials are typically mixed in the feeder. Such raw materials include natural aggregate materials such as sand and gravel, to which is added reagents and other additives. Mixers used in the preparation of cementitious material have taken many forms over the years. For example, pug mills have long been used, in which a drum with impeller blades rotates within a hopper containing the raw materials. Also, vibratory mixers have been widely used in the past, in which mechanical vibratory motion is imparted to a hopper, causing the raw materials to be mixed. More recently, various types of continuous mixers have come into use, in which a rotating, screw-shaped member is provided within a hopper, and the raw materials are continuously moved along the internal surface of the screw. The mixing which occurs in such devices is substantially continuous. In some applications, each screw is typically driven by a dedicated motor. Various types of continuous mixers have been used, depending on particular needs. One continuous mixer is shown in U.S. Pat. No. 6,470,069 to Stowe et al., in which an auger structure includes a rotating auger in combination with a plurality of stationary screening members. The stationary screening members are adapted to be placed in contact with the material being mixed and the auger, to separate entrained air from the material. Another type of continuous mixer is shown in U.S. Pat. No. 6,378,042 to Lutter et al., in which a mixture of raw materials, including a dryer feed, is mixed and passed through a tube to a mixing chamber. The mixing chamber is in communication with a cylinder, which is compressed to mix the material to produce cementitious mix in the cylinder. Other types of continuous mixers are shown in, for example, U.S. Pat. Nos. 5,919,330 to Kaneko et al. and 6,254,715 to Katayama et al., and U.S. Pat. No. 5
