The House Oversight Committee voted to refer former Secretary of State Hillary Clinton, former FBI Director James Comey, and former U.S. Attorney General Loretta Lynch to the Justice Department for potential perjury or obstruction of justice. The committee's vote was along party lines, with Democrat California Rep. Zoe Lofgren, who accused Republicans of "an attack on democracy," and Republican Rep. Jim Jordan of Ohio saying, "I'm sorry that the rest of America has got to hear about it." The Democrats' accusation was that Republicans were trying to discredit Clinton as a witness before a federal grand jury. Republicans said the committee was under investigation for leaks of grand jury information. However, at least eight members of the panel expressed concern about possible leaks about the grand jury investigation in a closed session, before the vote. In a statement, House Oversight Chairman Trey Gowdy announced the panel's referral of Clinton, Comey, and Lynch to the Justice Department for "potential violations of federal criminal statutes," as well as the potential obstruction of justice. "The American people have a basic expectation that public servants will act honorably, provide honest answers under oath, and nothing more," Gowdy said in a statement. "Even some of the most highly qualified and honorable people sometimes struggle with whether to tell the truth." "As you might imagine, as the investigation continues, there are individuals who testify before the grand jury with an intent to provide false or misleading testimony," he added. "That is a genuine threat to the integrity of the American system." "The same is true of Hillary Clinton, Director Comey, and Attorney General Lynch," the statement continued. "So, with that as context, I am issuing an initial referral to the Department of Justice." In a statement issued soon after the panel voted, Gowdy said they would refer the matter to the Justice
