The way to go about it is to download the program and run it. When it is installed, it opens and starts with the following screen: You must select the correct installation location in order to continue. You have two options: If you have no idea where the directory in which the executable is located is, this is quite intuitive. If you have some idea, you can just point to it and click 'OK' to continue with the

Go to the tab called 'Backup' and click 'Create New Backup'. The next screen will open, showing two options: In the left one, you will see a list of different possible files you can choose from. To save a file, select the checkbox next to the file you want to back up.

To restore the backup file, select the checkbox next to the file that you wish to use it. After you've done that, click on the 'Backup Now' button. That's it!
