What's new in Crysis 3 Engine.It's the little things that make a big difference when it comes to conditioning yourself for running or cycling. These tiny tweaks could really help you beat your marathon time. 1. Smile more Rationalising the benefits of a smile is something that comes naturally to us. We learn to smile to get a friend's attention, or to impress our mum. Studies suggest that we could smile more when we feel low, and it could be the perfect motivation to kickstart your day (and possibly postpone snoozing too). 2. Do some sit-ups to calm the nerves If you're running a marathon and feeling anxious about how you're going to feel when you start, a few push-ups at the beginning can help. Research has shown that push-ups can help you become more confident when you run, and if they come before a stressful situation, they can even help you calm your nerves. Plus, it's a great way to warm up and get some blood moving to the extremities. 3. Take a hot bath You don't need to strip down completely to give yourself a soak in the bath, though. One study found that four minutes of a hot soak before running could decrease the amount of nervousness and
