If I call that function for getting access token from the API Server, I need to send that access token to our API Server. And if I want to set an access token to the app, I need to send that access token to the app. As a result, I've been confused about what do I want to use the Android Firebase. 1.API Server's Access Token 2.Android App's Access Token In this situation, I'll be confused at the REST API after getting an access token on the API Server. A: I have used firebase as my backend. In that I have used two type of auth. 1. FIRAuth.Auth() 2. FIRAuth.IdentityClient() In case of using firebase as your backend, the best option is to use FIRAuth.IdentityClient, it is not allowing to fetch user info. If you are using android, i will highly recommend you to use firebase Auth. If you want to fetch all the user info for all the things such as email, uid etc, there are no other way apart from using firebase Auth. and if you want to send this data to your android application, you can use FirebaseMessagingService() to send push message, in case you want to send the token to your android application you can use its onTokenRefresh() method, but its good to do that in a non-activity class, i did it in background. Please also read the official document, the foregoing reasons, we affirm the decision of the district court. AFFIRMED. NOTES [1] Gerald Jacobs and Gene Jacobs are the brothers who own the properties in question. We will refer to them collectively as "the Jacobs." [2] The Jacobs also alleged that the property is a "floodplain" and that the Corps had failed to comply with the Flood Control Act of 1928, 33 U.S.C. § 401 et seq., because the Corps never established that the proposed Egton Interchange Project qualified for a Section 404 permit. These contentions have
