... Problem2 - There is a problem trying to use the library. (This problem is most likely caused by a delay between the time you load the library and the time you use it.) Solution1 - There is a problem with your.dll or.tlb. (This is the most common problem, and the solution is to find and fix the problem with your.dll or.tlb.) Solution2 - There is a problem with your.tlb. Solution3 - There is a problem with your.lib or.ocx. Solution4 - You don't have access to the modules that you need to use. Solution5 - You installed the wrong version of the.NET Framework. ... Check to see if the DLL/TLB version your using is compatible with the version of.NET Framework you have installed (this can be checked on the Tools &#x2013;Manage Packages&#x2013; menu option). If the version is not compatible, try to reload the components. If that fails, you may need to reinstall the.NET Framework. For more information on how to reinstall the.NET

Framework, visit: Be aware that some .NET components cannot be uninstalled and need to be reinstalled. For example, the online services component that Windows Update uses needs to be reinstalled if it's been removed. If this happens, the Windows Update service will be disabled until you reinstall the component. The Windows Update service keeps track of all currently installed .NET Framework components and any components that have been removed. If you attempt to install a .NET Framework component and Windows Update blocks the installation, reboot your computer and click the Start button. At the Windows Update window, click Check for Updates. Reinstall the .NET Framework components.
