What's New in the UnGoogled Chromium?

Chromium is a project that allows developers to design high-performance, standards-based web browsers that provide users with a fast, rich Internet experience. Their goal is to create a new web browser engine based on the Blink layout engine. Its open-source project was started in April 2011 and supported by the Non-Commercial and the Proprietary licenses. These licenses allow its use in general public and commercial projects, and also in groups and organizations wishing to use it in the development of non-profit software. Do you own a Surface device?
