Keymacro is an easy to use tool for creating keyboard macros on a Windows 7 PC or Windows 8.1 PC. Keymacro works in conjunction with the Windows keystroke editor (scheduler) in order to create a keyboard macro for a specific keystroke or key combination. The process to create a keyboard macro for the application is very straight forward. Once Keymacro is installed, you can begin to create keyboard macros to any text field or button on the Windows desktop. Keymacro provides a "Macros" menu which shows a list of all the current macros available for your keystrokes. New macros can be created by adding a shortcut to a command that makes the macro happen and then adding a description of the keystroke or key combination. A "Schedule" menu shows a list of all the macros you have created. You can edit a macro and you can run the macro immediately (no scheduling necessary). You can also add the macro to a schedule so you can run it as you need to. If you need to edit a macro when you are not in the Keymacro editor you can simply open the text box in the "Main" menu and click on the macro. You can also run macros from the "Macros" menu or a shortcut that is set to start at boot. These are perfect for quick actions that you need to run often. Keymacro is in beta version. We are always looking to make this an even better product and would love your input and suggestions. Please visit our website at: for more information on how to get the beta version, additional functionality that we are working on, and to give us your input. Keymacro supports multiple languages and does not require any additional software to work. The only languages that are supported for now are: English, German, French, Spanish, Italian, and Chinese.
