17/12/2009 Ophir is a remote desktop client for Microsoft Windows. Ophir is small and very easy to use. Ophir is a remote desktop client for Microsoft Windows. Ophir is small and very easy to use. Ophir supports all Microsoft's Remote Desktop Protocol (RDP) compliant remote servers. It is compatible with Windows server 2008 x86 R2 and Microsoft Windows 7 (x86 and x64). Ophir allows you to connect to your server remote access using Windows Explorer or any VNC viewer. Besides the Windows remote desktop client, Ophir provides the connection to Linux servers and requires only an SSH client. Ophir allows you to use your favorite SSH client or an SSH client embedded in the Microsoft Windows. Ophir can be used as an SSH client for your NAS (an SSH client isn't included by default but can be downloaded separately). Ophir uses the official PUTTY SSH library and therefore won't show the dreaded Putty-SSH logo when connecting to the server. Ophir includes many useful features. For example, you can connect with multiple accounts. You can specify the icon to use for each account and can configure each of the icon layouts. Accounts can be configured to load at startup and can have different configurations. You can use a unique icon for the remote host (even for the icon you use locally). Ophir comes in three different versions: Windows and Linux, Windows and Mac and Windows and Linux. Ophir is free and available at Ophir has two major components: a client and an optional server. The client offers a simple to use graphical interface to connect to remote servers using any RDP compatible server. The server supports connections to unauthenticated, authenticated and encrypted servers (secure connections). The server also supports starting the required server on the client in a non-interactive mode, saving even more processing power (this can be useful for servers with limited resources). Ophir includes many useful features for remote connections. For example, the client allows you to connect to Microsoft Remote Desktop servers without having the server installed on your workstation. Ophir is compatible with all Windows 7 and Windows Server 2008 R2 (R2 x86 and x64) and compatible Linux (Debian and Ubuntu) servers. Ophir can be easily installed from the Windows Installer 17/12/2009 My Internet Hotspot
