How to Write a Sentence the Smart Way Are you sick of being told to write a 'good' sentence? The good sentence is an art form, a style, a conversation, a formal business meeting, a report, a cover letter, an official document, an agreement, a job interview, a page in a book, a poem, a speech, a self-help book. It's a notion that was a - maybe still is - a high art. The word 'good' itself has become a thing. It's been turned into a fashion statement. What you are now being told to write, is not a good sentence, but a 'good' sentence. The good sentence is probably being taught in school, in journalism, in creative writing, in poetry writing courses. It might be the first sentence in an article, or the last, and it might be accompanied by a list of what not to do. You might have even heard the phrase 'kill your darlings' on a school project. You might feel like the teachers are over-simplifying. They're certainly aiming at achieving some clarity and brevity. But good teaching is all about simplicity, clarity and brevity. And the good sentence is an artistic form, a formal business meeting, a report, a cover letter, an official document, a poem, a page in a book, a speech, a self-help book. The good sentence has a purpose. It's a precise instrument. So let's look at what a good sentence is, and how to write one. What is the purpose of a good sentence? To put it simply, a good sentence means: A sentence that works well. A sentence that does exactly what you want it to do. To illustrate: Suppose you are selling soap and it's a clear, beautiful day. You decide to make an ad in the local newspaper, to let people know what your soap can do for them. So you write: I'd like to spread the message that my soap is great. Because what you want to do is to communicate the idea that your soap can make your skin great. This is a good sentence, because it says exactly what you wanted to say. It is not clunky and not pretentious. It's concise and it's perfectly spelled. So, in this case, 'the message that' does not mean anything to you, and you're

Ludwig is an intelligent and powerful app that will help you make sure your texts are error-free. It will show you how other people wrote the same phrase as you did and even point out any spelling or grammar errors you made. Ludwig Homepage: Ludwig is available for free for a limited time, so don't miss out on it. Get it for your Windows 10 PC or mobile device and start writing in English as soon as possible! Telegram-Chat August 25, 2020 The official channel of Telegram messenger, Telegram-Chat, has announced the beta release of their new app. The app is meant for working with multiple groups of people. Basically, it will allow you to sign in and start a conversation with multiple people. However, this is not the same as the usual features we associate with Telegram. The unique thing about this app is that you don't need to be signed in, while you can be signed out. Once you sign in, however, you can add new people and start talking with them. The app is also packed with a lot of other features, including: ► Recent chats In this part, you will be able to find out what are the most recent chats you have had. ► Recent members It will enable you to see the full profile of each member of the chat. ► Deleted chats Simply tap on this menu, and you will be able to see all the recent chats you have had. ► Replies Here you will be able to see who answered which questions and to which groups. ► Filters At the moment, there are two filters available: week and day. ► Search With this you will be able to search the chat for specific words. ► Customized search Once you have selected the words you want to find, this will allow you to search in all the messages you have exchanged. ► Filter by date and time In this section, you will be able to find out what conversations were held during specific times of the day or week. ► User-configurable topics This part is meant for people who want to create their own topics for the chat. ► Emoji The app contains support for emoji. ► Secret chat rooms If you want to create a group that will be able to talk about certain topics in secret, you can do so. Telegram-Chat Description: Telegram is a messenger app that aims to offer its users the best possible privacy, speed, and security in chat communication. The app allows you to chat with other people, send files, photos, videos, and other media. And there is no need to pay anything to use this tool. Telegram-Chat Homepage:
