It's hard to forget how, in the heyday of MRA weenie Rooster, no-holds-barred troll screedings would litter the message board like crow guano in the eyes of some poor, abused woman. We wanted to know why women were such horrible, bitter whiners, so we gave our beloved leader a stack of sheets to write on, and she obliged. Ultimately, it was the personality behind the message, the sense that we were dealing with a not-particularly-well-adjusted, probably crazy person, that made her posts entertaining. Some of her ravings made sense, some didn't, but the sense that she was engaged in the discourse was important. I don't remember being afraid of her, even when she threatened to put someone's head on a stick. In some sense, she was a clownish stand-in for the notion of a deeply unhappy, alienated man online, a sort of apologist for male anger, one who wrote and argued in the language of men. We're looking for our mascot. Do you have our mascot? Let us know. Email with your two best questions, and a (tasteful) tagline. Don't forget to specify a mascot.
