While looking at the code of a factory method that fills a vector with booleans (my vector to represent a map from integers to booleans, to be read later), I thought to myself "why is it necessary to return a different type of object depending on how many elements you want to put into the vector?". I mean, at the end, the vector is going to be a vector of booleans (or zeros?). Why is it important to return different types of objects? You can write what you want and put it in a vector after all! Here is the code: using namespace std; class MyVector { public: MyVector() : actualSize(0) { } void insertZero() { actualSize++; } void insert(bool & val) { insertZero();

Q: how to apply a style to the whole page from a style.css file? I want to apply a style to the whole page. The style.css file is contained in a subfolder. I know I have to put a to the html page and specify the path but how do I specify the whole page? I'm using php code to create the html page. This is my code: $link = EOF; $fp = fopen($file, 'w'); fwrite($fp, $link); fclose($fp); and I'm using this HTML code: Title content A: Firstly, you need to make sure your file is readable, so give it the appropriate permissions. Then add Title and you should be fine. It may be the easiest way is to just have a tag in the head of your document as well. The present invention relates to a semiconductor device, a manufacturing technology thereof, a display, a light-emitting device and an electronic apparatus, and more particularly to a semiconductor device having a light-emitting element (also referred to as a light-emitting layer) that emits light, a manufacturing technology thereof, a display, a light-emitting device and an electronic apparatus. In the field of displays, an organic electroluminescent element (organic EL element) is recently attracting attention as a light-emitting element which does not need a backlight. The organic EL element has a structure in which a light-emitting layer (light-emitting layer) is interposed between a pair of electrodes (positive electrode and negative electrode), and spontaneous light is
