Newly synthesized proteins for the 7B2 adrenergic receptor couple to G proteins: high-affinity agonist binding by a new chimeric peptide. A peptide (ILHKYNRN) that contains the 7B2 receptor (7B2R) region corresponding to residues 30-37 of the beta2-adrenergic receptor (beta2AR) coupled to a cyclic peptide (YL) that serves as a "tether" for the 7B2R region has been shown to stimulate GTP-binding proteins (G proteins) and to stimulate the proliferation of human embryonic kidney (HEK) 293 cells stably transfected with the 7B2R. To determine whether peptide [ILHKYNRN]LY represents a sequence that is functionally similar to the native 7B2R, this peptide was radiolabeled and tested for agonist binding. Peptide [ILHKYNRN]LY binds with high affinity to guanosine 5'-O-(3-thiotriphosphate)-dependent G proteins (Kd = 4.5 nM). The binding of peptide [ILHKYNRN]LY to G proteins and 7B2R agonist binding are mutually exclusive. To determine the functional coupling between the newly synthesized proteins and G proteins, HEK 293 cells stably transfected with the 7B2R were treated with a nonhydrolyzable analog of GTP (GTP gamma

S) and tested for intracellular cAMP accumulation. Cells treated with peptide [ILHKYNRN]LY, agonist (L-norepinephrine), or a combination of the two were found to have additive increases in cAMP accumulation. In addition, the increase in cAMP accumulation caused by peptide [ILHKYNRN]LY was diminished by treatment with pertussis toxin. These results suggest that peptide [ILHKYNRN]LY binds to the 7 1d6a3396d6
