MIME types are used by most modern web browsers, e-mail programs, and other applications to identify and display various types of files. Antiman.A@mm virus does not change any of your existing MIME types settings. This virus replaces the MIME types that are used by your web browser, e-mail program, office applications, etc. to identify and display various types of files with its own. As a result of this change, the default display of certain types of files may be incorrect. Antiman.A@mm virus comes with the MIME types infected files, so there is nothing you can do to prevent this virus from replacing MIME types. For example, when you try to open a file, your web browser may decide to display this file in a very specific way, and not display other types of files. In some cases, Antiman.A@mm virus may also cause some web browsers to display websites in a very weird way. If you notice that your web browser is displaying websites incorrectly, it may be a sign of this virus. Antiman.A@mm virus can also cause your email program to display the affected MIME types in the wrong way. As a result, messages that you receive from other people may have incorrect file types attached to them, which may cause you to inadvertently download malicious files. Antiman.A@mm virus also creates a [logfile] named "M.TXT" in the root of the infected computer. This [logfile] is used to track the actions of the virus. Thus, you can remove the Antiman.A@mm virus right away by deleting this [logfile]. Antiman.A@mm virus replaces some existing MIME types with its own, which means that you may have to configure your web browser, email program, and other applications to properly identify various types of files. If you are using a Microsoft Windows based computer, you can find instructions on
