Most online courses that teach Photoshop are broken down into bite-sized lessons that take just a few hours to complete. If you're considering taking a class, look for a class that offers lessons that last about an hour each or less, depending on how much you learn from the material. Counting the Benefits Adobe Photoshop is so powerful that when you hear it discussed, you may have heard or seen things about its capabilities without knowing exactly how strong its abilities are. You may have heard something like: A professional designer uses Photoshop; a hobbyist uses Corel PaintShop Pro. Anyone can use Photoshop — even if you're not a designer or photographer. You can use Photoshop as a graphic designer (logo, business card, brochure, book cover, and so on). You can use Photoshop to create images for Internet sites, brochures, posters, and many other places. You can use Photoshop to photograph and manipulate an image on a Mac or Windows computer. You can use Photoshop to create Web graphics, screen captures, animations, and so on. How much can you do? That's up to you and what experience level you have, but you can do a lot with Photoshop. The tools fall into three categories: Painting tools Filters and effects Guided drawing tools This section covers the painting tools and effects, but first we provide a brief overview of the entire toolbox. Photoshop's painting tools are its most fundamental toolset. Using these tools, you can create beautiful photo manipulations, and you can use them to create, say, a business logo or other image on a Mac or Windows computer. The painting tools in Photoshop work in the same way that they work in any other graphic design program: The Surface: The surface of the layer or canvas to which you apply the painting tools and effects. The Brush: The paintbrush tool: You paint on the Surface, and the brush creates the design. The Canvas: A blank area that is the size of the Surface. You can paint on the Canvas. of your recipes. I'm just 1/2 my way through volume 1 but it's been excellent. Just because it's not about being vegan doesn't mean you can't do it well. Hi Leah, it's been a long time since we spoke. I always enjoy your blog. You always provide an enjoyable look into vegan/vegetarian cuisine. You are also kind enough to include a link to my books when you mention them on your blog. All the best to you and your family, and I'm so happy to see you around again. I'm still working on a book but I'm finishing up a lot of the recipes and writing a bit about creating your own sauces and whatnot. It's coming along slowly but I'm looking forward to sharing it with you soon. I hope you're doing well with your own vegan restaurant, that sounds amazing. Great to see you back!! Just some changes that you need to watch for. First and foremost, I love how you can find like-minded people on this site. It's a great community, with people providing both serious vegan inspiration as well as being non-vegan people too: helping each other with recipes, resources, etc. That said, veganism is a choice and you're entitled to your opinion on the matter. Just because you have choices doesn't mean there's no conflict. People all over the world who love others are real and will be affected by this movement. That's very difficult to live with – one day, you may be friend or family to someone who becomes vegan and it hurts in your heart. These conflicts have existed for years – many of you know that I have a very strong opinion on the matter – so I'm just helping people understand that veganism is a choice that affects real people, and a growing number of people for the better, in a lot of ways. Keep doing what you're doing. Leah – we need your passion and wisdom. Hi Leah, it's been a while since I've last looked, but I'm a vegan too, have for a while. I remember when you first started out, with all your enthusiasm and energy. I enjoy reading your blog, and learning a lot! I've been mostly vegetarian

Q: Which gid does a user get when created via Linux's useradd command? I am creating several hundred users on a system that I'd like to be able to reset as fast as possible. Useradd --gid 1000 doesn't seem to be working. I am finding users assigned other than 1000. Is this normal? Should I just issue the command anew after recreating the user? A: Useradd man page says: -g, --gid=GID Use GID instead of UID. However, run id It's already 509, what you're creating as user with useradd is user 999. A: It will use 999 by default: $ id uid=1000(stefan) gid=1000(stefan) groups=1000(stefan),4(adm),24(cdrom),27(sudo),30(dip),46(plugdev),109(lpadmin),123(sambashare) A: As the other answer says, useradd --gid is the name of a flag for the useradd command. The gid (an abbreviation for group ID) can be used to set the group of a user. Normally useradd will try to set the user's user ID and the current group at the same time; the -g flag overrides this behavior. However, useradd --system is a different flag which specifies to use the group ID 1024 for that user. Thus you should use useradd -g 1000 -s system username to create that user. This will create a user in group 1000 with ID 1000. If your system has user 1000 in group 1000, they will be identical. If user 1000 is in group 1001, this will give the newly created user 1000 in group 1001. The purine 5'-nucleotidase from liver of the frog, Rana temporaria.
