Applying a Color or Black-and-White After you create a new layer, you are able to apply any existing color to it or create a black-and-white copy. At the top of the Layers dialog box is the Apply command. * The Apply command is on the top row with the next-to-last icon. The Apply command is linked with the next layer in the Layers dialog box. * To select the Apply or Reset command, display the Layers dialog box and press Ctrl+A (Shift+Ctrl+A) twice. * You also have the Reset command under the Layers dialog box's Edit tab. This command is the same as the Apply command, except that it resets all the attributes of a selected layer. (Resetting attributes is covered on Resetting Attributes.) In this exercise, you will use the same image of the girl shown on page 64 for the whole project. You will use the Ellipse tool to draw a circle and a smaller circle inside the larger one and place them on a new layer. Finally, you will edit the smaller circle to create a solid shape. 1. **Using the Ellipse tool, trace a circle in the foreground photo*. You need to trace this circle with a very soft brush or pen. You can see the circle and oval window directly below the Brush and Eraser tool icons, along with the Magic Wand tool. 2. **Type 11.0 in the Oval box and press Enter (Return on a Mac)*. You can't see the new layer at the moment, but it should be on the right side of the Layers dialog box, just below the selected layer. 3. **Click the Create new

1. Technical Field The present disclosure relates to a method of manufacturing an electronic device, more particularly to a method of manufacturing an electronic device having a semiconductor package with a through-vias. 2. Description of Related Art Conventional surface mounting technology (SMT) generally adopts bumps of the gold-plated, tin-plated, or tin-lead solder etc. as a contact between a chip and a substrate (e.g., a printed circuit board). The bumps are generally formed on a back side of the chip by a metal mask, a stencil printing, or a doctor blade printing etc. in a multiple-step process. The solder bumps can be formed on the chip via a deposition process, so as to minimize the substrate being polluted, and enhance the flexibility and the reliability of the product. However, as semiconductor technology develops, a new packaging technology is required. The semiconductor package is generally implemented with the through-vias. The substrate may be formed by the copper wiring layers laminated together. When the solder bumps are formed on the chip via the deposition process, an internal stress may be generated in a chip body. The internal stress may cause the connection between the solder bumps and the chip to become loose. As a result, a failure may occur in the electronic device. Modified electrode configurations in the assessment of cutaneous ion-capture and electrical impedance spectroscopy. The difference in electrode configuration was studied between electrodes with and without applying a stress to the skin in order to evaluate the capability of skin ion-capture and the potential of electrical impedance spectroscopy. In ion-capture measurement with the Vison-Pro2 using the epidermis, no significant differences were observed between electrodes with and without applying a stress when the validity of the measurement was assessed by pH and conductance values. In the impedance measurement using the epidermis, the average impedance values with the change in electrode configuration at 5 KHz were, respectively, 367 and 241 omega with an applied stress at a fixed ac voltage of 4 V and resistance measurement at 6 KHz. before."
