Q: How to get all files in a directory and sub-directories and check if the file is a.txt file in Javascript? First question. I would like to get all the txt files in my directory from the main directory. Then I would like to check if it is a.txt file. If it is, I would like to change its color and give it a border. My code seems to be correct, but nothing happens when I run it. I've been trying for the last 3 hours. Sorry for my ignorance. var dir = document.getElementById("dir"); var files = document.getElementById("files"); var root = document.getElementById("root"); root.onclick = function() { var dir = document.getElementById("dir"); var files = document.getElementById("files"); var root = document.getElementById("root"); var root_clicked = false; root.onclick = function() { if (!root_clicked) { dir.innerHTML = ""; files.innerHTML = ""; dir.innerHTML += ""; files.innerHTML += ""; root.onclick = function() { if (!root_clicked) { dir.innerHTML = ""; files.innerHTML = ""; document.getElementById("root_clicked").innerHTML = "

Q: If statement doesn't display the color the right way I'm attempting to make a button in the below code to switch the if statement that gives a message of "ready" or not. When I run the code, the text does not display and is not colored green like it's supposed to. What do I do? What I have so far: game = True button3 = Button(frame, text = "Get Ready!", width = 10, command = lambda: game) button3.grid(row = 1, column = 1) if game: Label(frame, text = "Ready", bg="green").grid(row = 1, column = 3) else: Label(frame, text = "Not Ready", bg="green").grid(row = 1, column = 3) A: The issue is that you have imported import Tkinter as tk. This means that game = True needs to be an assignment to the class game. In Python3, that means that all statements in the lambda should be expressions, so that game will be bound to the class name during the lambda's run. In Python2, you can write the following: button3 = Button(frame, text = "Get Ready!", width = 10, command = game) Which allows you to leave the game assignment as a statement. being no convenient way in which to use this in a functional language. public static void main(String[] args) { List lines = new ArrayList(); lines.add("line 1"); lines.add("line 2"); List result = run(lines); System.out.println(result); } private static List run(List lines) { Map map = new HashMap(); map.put("foo", 1); map.put("bar", 2); Set< Entry> entries = map.entrySet(); for (Entry entry : entries) { if (entry.getValue() > 1) lines.add(entry.getKey() + " " + entry.getValue()); }
