New Tactical Styles Included as part of the Starters and Explorers update is new tactical styles, which open up the ability for teams to play in different formations. These formations can be used across the eleven-a-side game, while the Tactical Import feature can be enabled to import popular formations used in competitive play around the world. The new styles can be accessed via the Tactical Styles Panel, which is accessible via the right stick when playing in 11v11 Co-op, and through the match in-game. For more detailed information about the new Tactical Styles, you can read the FIFA 22 Tactical Styles article. Spectre Tactics Combining the tactical features of FIFA 17's new "Spectre Tactics" system with the Tactical Styles panel, the new Tactical styles player analysis will enable coaches to build or switch tactics from one team to another. Spectre Tactics will allow the coach to analyse each player and his performance in a match, and then they can switch their tactics to the player who is more suited to the style of play for them. FIFA 22's Tutorial System The tutorial system has been completely redesigned and is now based on a 13-game "Training Camp" scenario. These Training Camps have been built in full 3D to allow players to dive in and play the game like they would in real life. FIFA 22's Tutorial System The improved tutorial system in FIFA 22 allows players to learn and practise key skills at their own pace. Featured in the tutorial is the new Skill Point System. Players need to successfully perform a skill to generate and save Skill Points to be used on the next successful execution of the skill. The tutorial progresses at your own pace, and players are able to return to the final part of the tutorial should they need help to complete any skill. The new tutorial also features the new Player Bio-Journal, which offers an in-depth look at the player that you are training. The Journal sections are best explored by pressing L1, and provides
