Effects of dietary ethanol and/or acute ethanol on the induction of liver aldehyde dehydrogenase, gamma-glutamyltransferase and alcohol dehydrogenase by acute ethanol in rat pups. Postnatal days 10-14 or 15-18, rats were fed an ethanol-containing or isocaloric control liquid diet for 10 days and following this given an i.p. injection of ethanol (3 g/kg body weight). Liver activities of alcohol dehydrogenase, aldehyde dehydrogenase and gamma-glutamyltransferase were assayed. Postnatal day 15 or 16 pups that were fed ethanol ad libitum from postnatal day 0-14 showed increased liver alcohol dehydrogenase activity. This increase was not prevented by an ethanol-containing diet. Acute ethanol treatment induced liver alcohol dehydrogenase, aldehyde dehydrogenase, and gamma-glutamyltransferase in day 15 pups and induced only gamma-glutamyltransferase in day 16 pups. The effects of ethanol on the induction of these liver enzymes were not influenced by dietary ethanol. It began last Thursday as a rumor online, and quickly morphed into an urban legend. Or perhaps a school shooter plot, said Marci Evans, a specialist with the Virginia Department of Behavioral Health and Developmental Services. Some on the Internet are falsely stating she said. "All the attention this story has received is making it more difficult to track down what the facts are," Evans said. But those who've taken part in the shooting, on Monday, took advantage of the spotlight to shed more light on what has quickly become known as the "Johnson City High School shooting." This story was developed by students with the help of Marshall University's Center for Public Service Journalism
