* Type Tool: The Type Tool allows you to create type characters in your image. You can add special effects, such as drop shadows and reflections. * Magic Wand: The Magic Wand makes selection simple and quick. Type control is included. * Lasso Tool: The Lasso Tool's great for making rough selections, and it can be great for creating selections in awkward areas. * Adjustment Panel: This tool gives you precise control over image adjustments such as brightness, contrast, and so on. * Layer Panel: The Layer Panel is where you make many layer changes. * Smart Objects: This unique feature allows you to edit any layer in a group and apply all changes to the whole group. * Content-Aware Move Tool: Selecting this tool makes your selection changes adaptive, meaning that your selection moves if the image content around your selection changes. Chapter 5 # Understanding the Adobe RGB Color Spaces IN THIS CHAPTER Making images in the Adobe RGB color space Understanding how color space impacts images Examining color spaces in more detail Unfortunately, the Adobe RGB color space exists within a range of other color spaces that you may not know about or be familiar with. Fortunately, you know enough about color and light to adjust or alter an image based on the color space it's in. In this chapter, I cover the differences between color spaces and why you should take a little time to know your color space. I also explain why color management and converting color spaces are so important in digital photography. ## Understanding Color Spaces It's important to know what color spaces exist and how they differ so that you can work most efficiently and use the correct color space in your images. Color _spaces_ are just fancy words for the range of colors your camera or scanner can record. In the case of color photography, a _color space_ is the range of colors that your camera or scanner can record. By understanding your camera's color space, you can better utilize it as a tool in your digital photography. * _Saturation_ is a _color component_ or a single color within a color space. As a color component, saturation indicates how much green, blue, and other colors are represented in an area of an image. As a color component, saturation tells you how much of a color is represented in an area

Flight over the Pampa Flight over the Pampa is a 1935 animated cartoon short animated by Walt Disney Productions. Plot The cartoon is set in the South American Pampa, a seemingly endless, flat plain. The short starts with a man and a woman trying to escape the area using a raft and a horse, but they are captured by a line of men with whips and chains, who drag them back to the palace. The horse, who is pulling the raft, comes upon a farm. On the farm, the horse is shot by a hawk. The man is still being dragged along, struggling in vain, but the people of the farm capture him. They take him to the king, whose daughter they want to marry. However, the man is in love with his own daughter, and has his freedom returned to him. In a surprising turn of events, the hawk turns out to be the princess's lover. The princess and the hawk have just had a brief romance. The king has condemned the man and his daughter for being lovers and has sentenced them both to be tossed into the Pampa. The hawk says: "You just wait," and fires off fireworks in midair, followed by a jet of water which goes shooting through the air, hitting the king in the face. The two lovers kiss and embrace as the night sky turns a jade color. Cast Home media The short was released on the 1991 Walt Disney Masterpiece Collection DVD.
