increase fluency,.Q: How to get data from a text file in python? I have a python program. I need to get data from a text file and display a dialog. The text file contains many rows, each row can have different data, like number and text. I want to display the first text line in a dialog as my first text in a dialog. So I have to get the data from the first line of the text file, get the number and text, and then display the corresponding data in the dialog. If possible, I need the exact location of the data from the text file.

Thanks. A: Try this- `import re with open('file.txt', 'r') as datafile: for line in datafile.readlines(): if re.match("Some pattern", line): print(line) #set dialog data` It will read all the lines in the file except the first line and match whatever it needs to match. Output of the above code- line from the file.txt If it has number and text, then it will print that line and then it will go to the next line of the code. Q: Can a lightsaber actually cut through a door? When we talk of cutting through a door, we normally think that it has to be a kind of "metal" or "steel" type material, would a lightsaber cut through it or not? From the TV show (I've only seen the 1st movie) we seem to see that when Mace Windu tries to cut through the door, it doesn't do anything while he uses his lightsaber to cut through it and we actually see that he had to step back first, in order for it to cut. What about the Death Star (IIRC), does it cut through a sheet metal door? Also, in the new Star Wars that is coming out, what about the door next to the Throne Room? A: When Mace Windu tries to cut through the door, it doesn't do anything while he uses his lightsaber to cut through it first time, that young man was rude to me." "He just introduced himself and immediately disparaged me." "The little manager." "In my experience, it is very hard to get on with people of that age." "Sometimes they can be very witty and provoking." "But in this case..." "It was so rude." "Yes." "I agreed to bring him something." "In fact, I agreed to bring him a double vodka." "He likes a double." "A double vodka." "Yes." "And it was two." "I've brought one of my own." "You see, you don't know what we have to do." "He has to go through three hurdles." "First, he wants a vodka." "Second, he wants it green." "And then finally he wants it in a Martini glass." "And he was really the worst of the lot." "You know, I often think " "After all I've done for you, if I ever get to heaven, Saint Peter will call me a white slave." "Of course, I'm sure that he'll agree." "But if it gets to that point, things will be difficult." "I've already had one run-in with the Devil." "After that episode, I got an appointment from the Almighty."

"Let's hope it's not a case of the Devil."
"That'd be the end of everything." "Ernst, you seem much more cheerful today."
"Can't a father be cheerful?" " Do you know that?"
