The bundle is a big set of ActiveX components that provide developers with an easy way to implement HTTP and HTTPS protocols to objects that are included in various web pages. The suite is especially useful for building HTML pages, documents, images as well as other resources that are widely available through web browsers. Since the idea behind the components is to create a smooth request-response objects process, it means that the objects are parsed and then stored as request objects. Therefore, the task of the developer is to populate the response object with the body properties, StatusCode and other things they deem necessary. As a side note, if you manage to customize the operation from within the RequestDone event, then the response to the user request is performed automatically. The library can be embedded directly into your application and can work as standalone or along with the web server you are currently employing. Moreover, you can grab complete information on the connected users along with their originating IP addresses, total connected time, port, so on and so forth. As far as the security is concerned, the suite packs SSL/TLS standards as well as the Basic / NTLM authentication (domain / AD support).
