To evaluate the long-term surgical outcomes of pars plana vitrectomy for eyes with rhegmatogenous retinal detachment. A retrospective study was performed of 2200 eyes with a mean follow-up time of 65.4 months (range, 14-150 months). A total of 3288 surgeries were performed during the study period and 1410 eyes were finally included. Among them, five eyes had recently undergone pars plana vitrectomy with intraocular gas tamponade. The mean age at the first operation was 45.5 years. Mean follow-up period was 65.4 months. Anatomic success rates after first surgery and final surgery were 69.5% and 96.5%, respectively. When regressed using Kaplan-Meier survival analysis, the final success rate was calculated at 84.3%. All failures underwent pars plana vitrectomy with scleral buckling; anatomic success was achieved in all of them (100%) with a mean follow-up of 26.0 months. In eyes with already-performed pars plana vitrectomy or combined surgery, mean final success rate was lower (74.0%) than that in eyes not receiving pars plana vitrectomy (84.9%) (P = 0.057). Success rates of eyes with periretinal membrane formation in both peripheral and macular areas were significantly lower (P = 0.016) than those of eyes without the formation. In eyes with multiple retinal breaks, the percentage of macular breaks (odds ratio 0.02, 95% confidence interval 0.002-0
