got the sense that the new president wants to reach out to gays and lesbians, perhaps in the hope of broadening his coalition. Will that be enough to keep him in the White House? Let's leave that question for another day. In any event, it's clear that the ideals and preoccupations of the progressive movement and the LGBT community are far more closely aligned than ever before. Bush, for his part, made a good start with his announcement of the gay ambassador to South Africa. He might have asked us for suggestions on a gay ambassador to the nation of our birth. But his administration has been remarkably slow to appoint gay people to high positions, save for Cass Sunstein, who has been a senior adviser to the president. And the fact is, the gay community doesn't need any gay ambassadors to the nation of our birth, but plenty of gay ambassadors of several other countries that support our fight for gay rights. As a marriage equality supporter, I want to see the president set the tone for the entire administration by appointing gay people to key positions in the White House. I'll add that I'm going to ask every gay person I know to nominate some gay people for positions in Bush's administration. And to be clear, I'm not asking them to become gay advocates. But I do want them to understand that the president's philosophy on LGBT rights is our philosophy too. I also want to see a lot more gay people in the public square on our behalf. If we are going to get serious about fighting for marriage equality, we are going to have to make it our business to be part of the conversation. And I want us to make sure that it's a safe place where people are free to be themselves. Perhaps we haven't heard the last of the sordid saga of sexual harassment. Harvey Weinstein, an Oscar-winning movie producer and executive, has been exposed for allegedly sexually harassing a lot of women over several decades. Many of the stories about his alleged sexual predations came from Times reporters, who have been kind enough to share them with me. In short, the man apparently likes to brag to friends and strangers about his sexual conquests and was not above using his status to get actresses to pose for him. The revelations about Weinstein's conduct have been piling up for weeks. But Weinstein and the Times are apparently still negotiating over a settlement. What he has been doing, however, is a lot worse than his alleged misconduct

Q: Add new column to existing dataframe pandas - Python I have a data frame which looks something like this: df = pandas.DataFrame({'A': [1,2,3], 'B': [1,2,3], 'C': [1,2,3], 'D': [1,2,3], 'E': [1,2,3], 'F': [1,2,3], 'G': [1,2,3], 'H': [1,2,3], 'I': [1,2,3], 'J': [1,2,3], 'K': [1,2,3], 'L': [1,2,3]}) The idea is to add a new column containing a sort of cumulative sum of all the values of the other columns. So the sum of column A, B, C, D would be 5 (1+1+1+1) for example. I need the result to be like this: df = pd.DataFrame({'A': [1,2,3], 'B': [1,2,3], 'C': [1,2,3],
