* **Basic layer***. This layer enables you to place other layers on top of a layer to create layer combinations. These layers are called masks and can be used to make layers appear transparent or opaque. You can use layers to layer effects, including blending and painting. For instance, you can use a layer and a color-adjustment layer that have a transparency setting of 99 percent to simulate the look of glazing. In the same way, you can use a layer's mask to cut off some of a layer's effects. * **Master layer***. Like other layers, a master layer can be reedited as needed and is a convenient way of managing a group of layers. * **Brushes***. You use a brush in Photoshop to apply paint to a layer.

Photoshop Elements uses the GIMP as its underlying engine instead of Adobe Photoshop's Adobe Photoshop Engine (PSE). Presence of platelet activating factor in portal circulation of the rat and its role in portal hypertension induced by bile duct ligation. Platelet-activating factor (PAF) is a phospholipid that induces a variety of biological responses in inflammatory cells. The aim of this study was to investigate the presence of PAF in portal circulation of the rat in basal conditions and during portal hypertension induced by bile duct ligation and to evaluate the participation of PAF on portal hypertension. We demonstrated that a significant level of PAF was present in portal vein and blood of the animals with portal hypertension. This PAF level was increased after bile duct ligation, compared to sham operated rats and to normal rats. Platelet-activating factor acetylhydrolase was expressed in the endothelial and smooth muscle cells of the portal vein wall. The administration of the PAF antagonist BN50727 led to a reduction in portal pressure in those animals submitted to bile duct ligation, compared with the sham operated and control groups. Bile duct ligation led to an increase in the levels of PAF, thromboxane B(2), and reactive oxygen species in the liver. In conclusion, we showed that the presence of PAF in portal circulation and the increased level of PAF in portal vein of the rat following bile duct ligation could be one of the factors involved in the pathogenesis of portal hypertension. We suggest that the use of a PAF antagonist would be of benefit in the treatment of portal hypertension.

Spiritual Direction with a Doctor of Ministry In the 20th century, Catholics began to realise the importance of the mental and spiritual health of the individual. While it was not uncommon for a person to receive the sacraments of Confession and Holy Communion, often a sense of guilt and regret prevented a person from receiving them on a regular basis. In reaction to the problems, the Office of the Ministry of Healing was established in the early decades of the 21st century, with the purpose of providing healing and care to the people of God, both physically and mentally. Meditation is the simplest form of prayer, and is a way of combining prayer with the present and with God. There are many different forms of meditation; a form that is described as self-focused could be writing down a prayer, or it could be listening to a prayer or reading a prayer aloud. In both the Orthodox and Roman Catholic Churches, in the midst of the priesthood of all believers we recognize the uniqueness of each person and the essential dignity of every soul. Thus, we stress the importance of the identification and promotion of spiritual vocations, especially since there is no better way to pursue the eternal life. The post-synodal apostolic exhortation Sacramentum Caritatis on evangelisation, which was issued in 2014, stated that "evangelisation is a form of the ecclesial service performed with the heart, mind and hands, for the proclamation of the mystery of God's love in Christ". According to the Office of the Ministry of Healing, Spiritual Direction serves to: (a) Help the person to create an internal spiritual and emotional life and a relationship with God. (b) Develop an understanding of his or her personal journey through the years to reach a full understanding of this vocation. (c) Develop a relationship with God, in particular the relationship with the Holy Spirit. The initial steps involved in the process of Spiritual Direction should include the identification of the particular need the person has in his or her life. Two different types of spiritual direction can be defined: A. "Directed" - the ministrations of some form of spiritual teaching, instruction, prayer or listening which may or may not include physical contact (both in the form of a hand upon the person or perhaps a conversation in some form). B. "Undirected" - this is when a person talks with a spiritual director about
