This player movement data is being used to dynamically power player animations and create reactive, context-driven players, making them fight, pass, shoot and tackle as they would in a real match. For example, during a tackle, the player with possession would react to getting tackled by defending themselves or would flee to retain possession. Players would actively chase those with the ball, intercepting passes, performing co-ordinated movements to unbalance opponents and push them off the ball - all of which is perfectly timed. Other benefits of HyperMotion Technology include natural match-like physics, physics-based controls and reactions, and impact-based collision physics. Engine: Frostbite Platform: Windows, PlayStation 4, Xbox One Genre: Upright Soccer Game Release: October 27, 2015 Developer: Electronic Arts HyperMotion technology improves speed and responsiveness, and offers players more control and innovative skills. Whereas before, creating these "Hyper-powered" animations would take weeks of pre-rendering, now it can happen on the fly, using real-life player data. FIFA 22 improves the player management system, introducing a personalised My Career mode. Previously, the only way to earn upgrades to a player's skills was to complete a timed-based practice mode or even get a second player to join the team. FIFA 22 introduces My Player which allows you to choose the level you wish to play, and unlock the level you need to buy your player. FIFA 22 brings a brand new engine to PlayStation 4, Xbox One and PC, which includes all the benefits of Frostbite technology. The result is stunning visuals and more realistic and dynamic environments. The great news is that all of FIFA 22's feature updates, innovations and improvements are already in development. FIFA Ultimate Team brought forth FIFA Ultimate Team 2 (FUT2). This season's annual game update to FIFA Ultimate Team brings 19 new players including Alan Shearer (Academy and Hyundai Player pack), Agüero (New Car Pack), Julio Baptista (Academy and Hyundai Player pack), Graziano Pelle (New Car and Target Acquisition Player pack) and Zlatan Ibrahimovic (New Car and Target Acquisition Player packs).
