“After two years of work, we’re proud to offer FIFA 22 the best-in-class gameplay,” said Karl-Johan Andersson, Director of Video Game Development for EA SPORTS. “Utilising the technology of the athletes playing FIFA has been a focal point of the development process.” A number of FIFA Ultimate Team features have been updated in FIFA 22. These changes include new-found overhaul to FUT Manager Mode, FUT Game Hub with an improved stat page, completely new player animation, and an all-new Career Mode. New features in FIFA 22: FIFA Ultimate Team Manager Mode In FIFA Ultimate Team Manager Mode, players will be able to customise their main XI and myClub XIs with new traits and attributes. They can also develop new players by unlocking and combining the kit, training drills and attributes of other FUT players. The game’s interface has been redesigned to make customising your team easier. Real Football, Real Life Gameplay To improve the realism of FIFA gameplay, EA SPORTS has incorporated new animations, player control, and more realistic ball physics. The player movement, ball control and gameplay feel more fluid and realistic. All events, passes, tackles, dribbles and goals are completed with more immersive high-def graphics and sound. Career Mode In Career Mode, the gameplay is set on a route-based system, where players grow their career at clubs over multiple seasons. Players can use attributes to improve their chances of promotion or relegation. Players can also construct a contract with a club, which can be renewed every season. Clubs can be hired to build a playing squad with their transfer budget. FUT Manager Mode For the first time in FIFA franchise history, players will be able to set their wage budget, sign and manage their squad and then compete in FUT Manager Mode and be sorted into a league. Players will compete in either a seven or nine-team league with eight scheduled matches each week. Downloadable Team and Club Content A variety of bonuses, outfits and kits have been added to the game, such as new goalkeeper gloves or shin pads. Players can now also purchase a new away kit, which, for the first time in FIFA, can be changed to a different colour. We recently got to spend some time with FIFA 21 during a Gamescom
