learn to tutorial Callouts for water, credits and navigation are easy to create, and they come in a myriad of fantastic shapes and sizes. Callouts not only add flair to your design work but also add a critical element to anyone who interacts with your work. First, you must decide where you want the callout. You can, of course, add a callout to your existing artwork, but you can also create a new artboard, place your artwork in the upper left corner of the artboard, and then add the callout in the upper right corner of the artboard.

The Callout option from the Customize tool palette will automatically place the callout where you place your artwork. The position of the callout is normally slightly above or below the original art that you selected. TIP: To quickly switch between your original art and your callout, press the Shift key as you select and press the command key when placing the callout. Once you have placed your callout, you will need to assign a style to the callout so that the style is always applied to the text even if the text is copied or moved. Choose the Type tool. Place your cursor over any area of text and click and then drag upward to highlight the entire text.

Release the mouse button when your text is highlighted. The type tool automatically selects the text and the Text style bar above the word balloon will appear with the current type style. Click the arrow next to the Type Style bar to open the Type Style dialog box. To add a new type style, click the Add button and choose a type from the list of available styles. Click OK to apply the new type style to the selected text. The text is now styled in the same way as all other text in the artwork. The Add Callout Style option lets you assign a type style to a callout, and the Type Styles tab in the Customize tool palette lets you choose to apply this style to only selected text or to all
