Q: Is there a way to return only positive numbers in array C? In the C programming language, is it possible to return only positive numbers in an array? For example: `int nl = 3; int[] arr = new int[nl]; for (int i = 0; i < arr.Length; i++) arr[i] = JsonConvert.SerializeObject(arr)[i].ToString().Trim().Length;` If you have a more complex C# data structure you can serialize it using Json.NET or another library. For more information about Json.NET and serialization see here and here.

Aberrant hormone receptor status in men with seminoma. Seminoma is one of the most common testicular tumors in men. These tumors have characteristic clinical and pathological features. We examined the expression of estrogen and progesterone receptors (ERs, PRs) in seminoma using different immunocytochemical staining methods. We compared their staining patterns with steroid-binding abilities of these cells. Tumor cells from 42 men with seminoma and 12 normal testicular tissue specimens served as controls. We used anti-ER antibodies (ER-Pgr and ER-PgR) and anti-PR antibodies (PR-B and PR-A). Seminoma cells showed strong staining of ERs in 45.2% of cases and of PRs in 51.2%. In testicular tissue, strong staining of ERs was observed in 50% and that of PRs in 33.3%. All seminoma cases that stained for PRs also stained for ERs, while 34% of seminoma cases that stained for ERs were negative for PRs. Of seminoma cases staining for PR-A Approximately half of all Europeans are covered by European Health Insurance. Combined with unemployment compensation, workers in countries of the European Union are eligible for healthcare that is free of charge. However, with a median salary of €24,000 a year, the average salary of a European Union member state is just under €10,000. Consequently, some families live on less than €11,000 a year. Moreover, healthcare in European countries is often very expensive. Health insurance costs are among the highest in the world, and there are often waiting times for healthcare. The one-year waiting time for procedures in Denmark is 36 days. "This is too long. Waiting times for children should be reduced to four weeks," says Kristina Rudov, member of the Socialist Party and deputy for health and family affairs in the Danish parliament. Ms. Rudov and other politicians like Olaf Christensen (S) and Niels Mathiasen (S) from Klimakammer (the Climate Cabinet) intend to obtain better healthcare for everyone. Therefore, the demand has been raised for the introduction of Universal Basic Health Insurance. "Life is short and we should create more room for sick people," says Christensen. Thus, the call for Universal Basic Health Insurance started 20 years ago. Now, Christensen and Rudov are calling for it again. "We believe in fair allocation of resources for universal health care," says Christensen. In Denmark, the healthcare system can be seen as having three parts. First, there are the social insurance schemes, where employers and employees pay into a fund to save for healthcare. Second, there is private health insurance. Third, there is universal health insurance, where everyone who works is covered by the social insurance fund. However, the health insurance system in Denmark is fundamentally different from the systems in other European countries. After the introduction of unemployment compensation in 1945, the statutory state took over the responsibility for providing healthcare. The statutory healthcare fund is the biggest employer of physicians, nurses, dentists, and other healthcare personnel. Therefore, many doctors and healthcare staff are not members of a union. Today, the government is trying to reach a “social consensus” in order to introduce Universal Basic Health Insurance. Christensen and Rudov acknowledge that it is likely that the Danish healthcare system will be overhauled. “We want to get to a Social Agreement on healthcare, and then we want to present a plan for Universal Basic Health Insurance
