What's New in the Zune Explorer Enabler?

(*) Disabled when Zune is in use. (#) Not required for Zune 2.2 and prior (!) "Only Check for Updates" & "Always Check for Updates" checkboxes are required when the "Check for Updates" option is selected Various files contained in the Zune library are protected by security mechanisms. For example, songs, movies, and television programs in the Zune library are not available to download unless the user has previously purchased the content and has opted to get updates. These protected files must be set to private or shared with friends and family. If you are using Windows XP Home Edition, Windows XP Pro, or Windows Vista, the Zune applications are not completely compatible. The primary reason for this lack of compatibility is that when you delete a music file from your Zune, its position is not changed in the Windows file system. Therefore, the next time you try to open a file, the file is not automatically replaced with the file in its new location. With Zune 2.2, the first Zune application on your computer is not compatible with the Music library of the other Zunes. This incompatibility is due to the folder-based file system used in Zunes 2.2. [Q] If I buy a Zune 2.2, can I use it in any other device or media player? Yes. Zune 2.2 works with the Zune or Zune 2.2 devices. [Q] Can you transfer files from my old Zune to a Zune 2.2 device? Yes. If you install the previous version of Zune (on Zune 2.0 or Zune 2.1) on a computer then start the new Zune 2.2, you will find that all your old data will be accessible and usable. [Q] Are there any disadvantages of changing my Zune from version 2.0 to 2.2? The disadvantages of changing from 2.0 to 2.2 are related to data files in the Music library. If you have songs, movies and TV programs in your Zune 2.0 Music library, when you switch to Zune 2.2, you will not see these files in the Music library any more. For this reason, to see all your Zune files, you must upgrade to a Zune 2.2. There are some advantages, too: You will find that the installation of
