“With the new “HyperMotion Technology,” we aim to inspire and excite the world of football with a more fluid and fun to experience and much more realistic version of the beautiful game,” said Peter Forsberg, Senior Gameplay Engineer at EA SPORTS. “We are passionate about technology, and it is because of this that we are using these motion capture data to create the most authentic and realistic version of the game yet.” “HyperMotion Technology” is the first of its kind feature in a video game, and it will change the way fans watch sports and play sports in future. FIFA 22 introduces new ways to view matches. Viewers can choose from a 3D perspective with one-on-one player views, including a detailed top-down perspective view, or view the game from the goalkeeper’s point of view, and even in 360°. How it works During the FIFA Interactive World Cup, a motion capture-enabled football boot was used to record motion capture data from 22 footballers during a full match. The data collected from each player during the match was then analyzed and filtered to create an accurate player model. A player model is a representation of the player's shape, movements, and actions. This process combined with new physics technology, goalkeeping data and on-ball actions create the ultimate experience. This is how FIFA 22's HyperMotion Technology works: Calculate each of the athlete's body segments in motion. As each athlete moves, the technology analyzes the movements of their limbs, including the torso and the movement of the player's body. In this example, an athlete is being kicked in the chest as he is forced to keep his balance, thus taking the player's center of gravity to the left, and therefore requiring more agility to regain balance. Filter the data and record the movements of each of the segments on their own. Each individual segment of data is recorded separately and no longer has a full understanding of the movement of the player's body. Calculate the movement of each segment on its own, then move it with the new physics engine. No longer having full understanding of the movement of the body of the player, the data is now broken down into smaller parts and stored in an array, and each one is calculated, recorded, modified and stored individually in

FIFA is the world's leading sports video game franchise and also the most popular EA SPORTS videogame franchise. To date more than 250 million sports video games, including FIFA, have been sold in more than 65 countries and in 29 languages, and in June 2015 FIFA became the first sports videogame franchise to reach 100 million units sold. In the past five years EA SPORTS has been awarded five Sports Video Game of the Year awards at the VGX, GameTrailers, Game Revolution and Spike Video Game Awards. The EA SPORTS FIFA franchise is the most played sports video game in the world* and since its launch in 1994 has won more than 120 international awards, becoming the brand with the most awards on the PlayStation®2 system. * Based on internal estimates, EA reports the most played sports videogame by users to be NBA 2K, generating more than 30 million game-plays per week. These are just a few examples of the many ways our passionate players show their passion for the game, including using competitions called the FIFA Street Cup, FIFA Ultimate Team competitions, competitions sponsored by EA SPORTS and competitions organised by Official Competitive Play partners. So who are the FIFA players? The FIFA player-base has grown from more than 25 million unique monthly active users when the game launched to over 40 million on live services. Millions of new FIFA players join the FIFA world every month. Year-on-year, FIFA players have exceeded 20 million unique users across all platforms. Male gamers account for 50 percent of players and women gamers account for 50 percent of the players. More than 70 percent of all players are 13 to 25 years old. of the game. The ability to run full speed while changing direction all while controlling the ball is unparalleled. In The Lab, we are introducing the new “mentality” gauge. Every player has a “mentality” meter that can be raised by positive interactions with teammates, displays of skills and skill moves, or simply through playing the game, whether that’s in Custom Matches or in Online Validation. On-field actions will affect this gauge, such as performing well in a goal, hitting a pass, or even successfully dodging a tackle. If it hits its top level, the player will learn an ability, which adds a new layer of complexity to the gameplay and will open up new tactical and player creativity. We are introducing enhanced gameplay in all modes. In addition to improved player intelligence and decision making, gameplay will evolve as players battle for space and will be more aggressive. You will feel like a true football superstar, or ace striker, as the ball will react to your body, leading you to make the right decisions in the most advantageous situations, with new variety and intensity in the way players fight for the ball and make decisions. We are introducing new displays of team character and flair, as well as crowd atmosphere. We’ve enhanced crowd cheering and singing and the celebrations and end-of-game festivities of the players and fans will reflect their feelings for each other. We are introducing new set pieces, where the actions of the teams determine the outcome of the match. The
