“This technology is a great step forward in creating the most authentic video game football experience to date,” said Aaron McLean, creative director of FIFA. “With data for all 22 players, we are able to create faster decisions and instant reactions. The more players we can work with, the better the gameplay. Working closely with the FIFA team, we were able to get the ball to feel and behave in a more realistic way.” “We saw a need in the game to take our technology to the next level,” said Edward Snowden, technical director of Player Motion at EA Sports. “We wanted to do something that would have a major impact on the gameplay experience. There are a lot of rules and stats in soccer, including distance and speed of passing and shooting. By using real player movements, we are able to create a more immersive gameplay experience.” “Football is a video game where you run around and try to score as fast as possible, but it’s different when you are playing a high-intensity football match,” said Snowden. “We needed to use real player data to make the game feel more dynamic and capture that intensity.” FIFA 22 also introduces a brand new variety of attacking plays that throw players into unscripted situations and force them to make a quick decision. Quick decisions such as where to pass or shoot occur more often than in any other game in the franchise. With this new variety of gameplay, the player is always in control of the ball and his teammates; no longer are your teammates a deterrent to making a good decision. For the first time in FIFA history, every match will feature a FIFA Ultimate Team Mode. The new FIFA Ultimate Team mode gives players a chance to develop and create their own squad from over 350 players. The new feature, with its high-intensity gameplay and multiple game-changing circumstances, meets the players’ growing desire for more “pick your own” play. FIFA Ultimate Team also provides the all-new Player MyClub, which gives players the ability to build their own team over time with the club money and level they earn through gameplay. The feature is completely optional, so players can share their team roster with their friends online. The technology from the Player Motion team has been incorporated into the core of FIFA 22 and key features of the title were presented last week at E3 in Los Angeles, including

FIFA is the world's leading videogame franchise, with more than 450 million players worldwide and annual franchise revenues in excess of $1.7 billion*. FIFA features more player likenesses and nationalities than any other sports title and the biggest game modes in the franchise's history. Since the franchise's launch in FIFA 1999, the series has been a pioneer in the sports genre, setting the standard for realistic gameplay, player likeness and career progression. What's new in FIFA 22? FIFA 22 brings massive new changes to the way players adapt, react and break down under pressure. New defensive systems, the use of intelligent fouling and the adoption of VAR in every country and league have made it more challenging for teams to unlock goals. The new touchline technology means more players run into danger while attacking, and defensive pressure is more noticeable than ever. Your attacking creativity in the final third has been enhanced, with the biggest overhaul of skills for years. The brand new Squad Creator ensures every team will be built around individual players' preferred playing styles. Tackle now has a smaller arc and players are able to push back without being ganged up on, creating more opportunities to score. All 14 leagues now use VAR, making calls in the final moments of matches a thing of the past. This includes Premier League referees using the first live VAR implementation globally, and PGMOL introducing VAR in the second half of the 2014/15 season. The first-ever FIFA Ultimate Team mode puts you in the manager's chair. Buy FUT packs and create your own Ultimate Team of the best players in the game. Take your favourite team into your very own battle of the managers as you compete with friends, rivals and the whole world. Players come alive in new Living Fields throughout the game, adding greater context to the live action, including goal celebrations and new challenges. How do I buy FIFA 22? FIFA 22 is available now. You can play it using key buyers like Origin. What are the new features in EA SPORTS FIFA 22? You can play as one of 25 unique nationalities in FIFA 22. Choose your country: Portugal, Portugal Continental, Morocco or Tahiti. FIFA 22 is the biggest-ever expansion pack release for the series. Three new World Cups provide six modes of gameplay, including brand-new Beach Handball mode. There's also a revamped
